

Regulations on broadcast ownerships should not be deregulated. In fact, they should be regulated further. Public opinion is not reflected by the major media owners, particularly television networks. As evidence, I submit that recently Fairness and Accuracy in Reporting (www.fair.org) produced a study showing that the four major networks failed to provide a platform for views other than those in favor of war. While 61% of respondents to polls indicated that more diplomacy or inspections were in order, only 6% of sources on major television networks were of this opinion. Please do not deregulate broadcast ownership any further. Please create more regulation to allow for more direct public ownership.
